Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .In Jeffrey T Kiser-Paradi s distinctive collection of short stories, we find ourselves on a bit of a disjointed and oftentimes comic journey. Part fiction, part autobiography and family history, we are offered a glimpse into an odd, incongruous world where the past of the American South, rife with the War and fragrant great-aunts, comes crashing into the concrete and glass and Mind the Closing Doors existence of modern life. This is a place where individuals attempt to shake off their past, moving house and changing continents along the way, all the while awakening to the reality that long ago accidents of human folly, such as war and death, can still hold sway in the present. The events of 1863 can indeed diagram the outcomes of 1903, 1937, and 2004 It is a world where the material objects that comprise our everyday life are empowered with the ability to move and shake our destiny. A bed, a piano, a Christmas ornament, and an antique cupboard can not only remind us of just where it is we stand in the order of the universe, but can deliver a well-placed smack on the head as well. The stories range in date and setting from early twentieth-century Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, to late twentieth-century New York City, to modern day London, with subjects touching on the awakening of childhood consciousness, racism, suicide, midlife ennui, mourning and guilt, class and snobbery, and the capability of the past to colour, affect, and even determine one s present. For example, August 1903 explores the imagined internal breakdown of the author s great-grandfather before his sudden death in 1903. The Healer moves ahead thirty years to observe one of...
