I had heard that there was a Greek merchant living at Katarif; and, as in Africa hospitality from one white man to another is a matter of course, I enquired my way to his dwelling, and without further ceremony made my camels kneel at his door, and walked into the hut, where I received a very kind welcome. Katarif, or the market of Abou Sin, is situated on the border of immense prairies, which, in the rainy season, are covered with long grass, but at this time of the year, after being exposed for eight months to a burning sun, were an arid and waterless desert. I was told that, for three days march, we should find no water on the road; and...

Reviews

Simply no phrases to clarify. It is really basic but surprises from the 50 percent of the ebook. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.
